

BEING INVOLVED IN YOUR REHABILITATION PLAN

YOUR REHABILITATION PLAN SHOULD BE TAILORED TO YOUR LIFE

WHY BEING INVOLVED IN YOUR PLAN MATTERS

- Therapy becomes more meaningful — you're more motivated when you understand the purpose behind each activity
- You leave the facility safer — rehabilitation prepares you for real-life tasks like getting dressed, shopping for groceries, and moving through your day
- You're less likely to decline after discharge — your care plan is tailored to your individual needs and goals
- You start identifying issues early — such as dizziness, pain, balance concerns, or fear of movement

MAKING REHAB WORK FOR YOUR REAL LIFE

- Planning for what comes next — where will you go after rehab: home, assisted living, or another care setting?
- Your home environment matters — factors like rugs, narrow hallways, stairs, or bathroom setup can affect your safety and progress
- Your daily routine counts — do you plan to drive, cook, or need to use the bathroom during the night?
- Your personal goals guide therapy — whether it's playing golf, going for walks, or spending time with your grandchildren

IF YOU ARE TOLD “NO” TO BEING INVOLVED

- Ask for a care conference to discuss your goals, progress, and concerns
- Ask for the care plan in writing to review and understand your therapy goals
- Ask who is in charge of therapy goals (e.g., therapy lead or supervisor)
- Use the terms “patient-centered” and “shared decision-making” when expressing desire to be involved
- If needed, escalate respectfully by asking to speak with the facility administrator, patient advocate, or case manager
- If you feel unsafe or unheard, ask for your concerns to be documented in writing

REHABILITATION CHECKLIST

Questions	Notes
I want to understand my rehab plan — can you walk me through it?
What are the goals for me this week and why?
Here is what matters to me when I leave the facility. Can we work toward these? 1. 2. 3.
Can we practice the things I want to do at home?
What should I be able to do safely before I am discharged?
Can you write down my goals so I can keep track of them myself?
Can my family caregiver be trained with me before discharge?

Notes:
